Back Bay darkened by power outage once again

Lights out. More than 12,000 NSTAR customers were left in the dark after a cable malfunctioned at the Scotia Street substation. Deja vu. It is the same substation that caught fire in 2012, leaving 21,000 homes and businesses in the dark for days. Traffic nightmare. The outage closed portions of Interstate 90 in both directions, as well as Prudential Tunnel, which caused significant traffic delays on a Sunday packed with events in the Hub. Boston blackout. About 12,000 Back Bay and Fens residents dealt with power outages yesterday.

More than 12,000 people dealt with a power outage in the Back Bay and Fens early Sunday morning due to a cable malfunction at the Scotia Street substation — the same station that was to blame for a blackout in March 2012.

The outage began around 3:15 a.m. Sunday, according to NSTAR Spokesman Michael Durand. Although crews had power restored to all customers by late morning, residents were warned of another controlled power outage overnight.

"As we work to restore the grid to normal operations, we will be taking a planned outage overnight that will affect the customers impacted by [Sunday] morning's outage," Durand said. "The length of the planned outage will vary depending on where the customers are … we're taking steps to notify them directly by phone about tonight's outage."

NSTAR restored power to approximately 8,000 of the affected customers at about 9 a.m. yesterday, about 4,000 customers by 10 a.m. and the remaining few around 11 a.m., Durand said.

The areas affected included the Charles River to Columbus Avenue, and Copley Square to Fenway. The Prudential Tunnel eastbound and westbound was closed until 11:30 a.m. yesterday, and Interstate 90 east of the Allston-Brighton tolls was closed in both directions, causing significant traffic delays.

Yesterday's outage didn't hold a candle to the multi-day 2012 outage, which was caused by an electrical transformer fire and left 21,000 in the dark.

Mayor Thomas Menino's crisis response team yesterday deployed resources to the residents and businesses of the impacted area, as high temperatures prompted concern.

Hong Kong Dragon Boat races and festival fire it up along the Charles River

The 34th Annual Hong Kong Dragon Boat Festival drew 54 teams, including Team Thaa 1, to the Charles River in Cambridge and Boston yesterday and on Saturday. The annual event included Asian-inspired food, music, vendors, performers and crafts. It is reportedly North America's longest-running Dragon Boat Festival, and has grown from a small neighborhood event commemorating the death of the beloved Chinese poet-patriot Qu Yuan to the largest Asian American cultural event in New England, drawing more than 20,000 participants and spectators. / ERIN BALDASSARI, METRO

Mixin' music for Marathon victims

Two Emerson College graduates recently created a digital mix of songs by local artists to help comfort those still hurting from the Boston Marathon terror attacks and raise money for The One Fund.

"We wanted to find a powerful and creative way to bring people together and support the families financially, but we wanted to make sure that people were taken care of emotionally," said Isabel Thottam, 22, who along with Emily Smith, 23, released the songs through their startup venture, Hold On Another Day.

"It's kind of incredible how much the Boston music community has spread the word. Our slogan is 'Music is Power,' and we really believe that, so we want to be able to get it in the hands of as many people as possible," Smith said.

Emerson Strong

Some of the artists wrote songs specifically for the project, while others donated their work. The college's radio station, WERS-FM, offered up recording studio space. So far, the mix has raised more than $1,000 for The One Fund.

"To us, it's less about raising a huge amount of money. At the very heart of this project is our hope that people will listen to it and that it will provide some comfort," Thottam said.

Alleged serial robber arrested

A Dorchester man is scheduled to be arraigned today in connection with six armed robberies throughout Boston over the last three weeks.

Richard Calderon-Colon, 40, is accused of robbing three McDonald's and three Dunkin' Donuts at gunpoint just before closing time.

Boston Police said Calderon-Colon reportedly hung out in the restaurants and ordered coffee before the robberies. In some instances, Calderon-Colon allegedly jumped over the counter to retrieve cash from the registers.

The first holdup happened May 13 at a Washington Street McDonald's, and the last occurred May 29 at a Massachusetts Avenue McDonald's.

The suspect was arrested Saturday morning after Boston Police found him sleeping in a car parked on Ames Street. He is due in Dorchester District Court this morning.

Gitmo. Sen. McCain says support growing to close the controversial prison

Republican Sen. John McCain said yesterday that there is increasing public support for closing the military prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and moving detainees to a facility on the U.S. mainland.

"There's renewed impetus. And I think that most Americans are more ready," McCain, who went to Guantanamo last week, told CNN.

McCain said he and fellow Republican Sen. Lindsey Graham, of South Carolina, are working with the Obama administration to relocate detainees to a maximum-security prison in Illinois.

"We're going to have to look at the whole issue, including giving them more periodic review of their cases," McCain, of Arizona, said. REUTERS

Zimmerman. He faces up to life in prison if convicted of second-degree murder in the case.

Jury selection begins today in the murder trial of neighborhood watchman George Zimmerman, who shot and killed unarmed black teenager Trayvon Martin in 2012 and then famously walked free for 44 days, triggering nationwide protests.

Lawyers estimate the long-awaited trial will last four to eight weeks. Much of that time is expected to be spent picking a six-person jury that can be open-minded despite extensive publicity about some of the explosive issues, including racial profiling and self-defense, surrounding the case.

"They're going to have a tough time picking a jury. At this point, who doesn't know who Trayvon Martin is, and who George Zimmerman is?" said David Weinstein, a former state prosecutor and criminal defense lawyer.

More than 200 journalists have signed up to cover the trial. A tight blanket of security will be enforced by federal, state and local police in and around the courthouse in Sanford, Fla., near Orlando.

Even spectators in barricaded "public assembly zones" on the courthouse lawn will be subject to search. Four seats inside the courtroom will be rotated among local pastors, who will monitor the trial and be ready to help calm any racial tensions. REUTERS

Type 1 Diabetes?

Diabetes nerve damage can affect the legs, feet, or hands, causing numbness or loss of sensation. But since this nerve damage comes on gradually, many do not even realize they have a problem - until it leads to more serious complications.

Doctors at the Translational Pain Research Group at Brigham and Women's Hospital are conducting a research study of an investigational medication that may help reduce nerve damage for people with type 1 diabetes. If you choose to participate, you will receive a no cost, non-invasive test to help determine if you have early signs of diabetes nerve damage. You will also be compensated for time and travel.

Suspected ricin-laced letter to CIA located in Washington state

Ricin. A highly lethal poison made from castor beans, it can enter the body through ingestion, inhalation or injection.

Postal workers in Spokane, Wash., this weekend retrieved a wayward letter suspected of containing the deadly poison ricin that vanished for several weeks after it was sent from Washington state to a CIA address that does not receive mail, the FBI said.

The envelope resembled four ricin-laced letters postmarked May 13 from Spokane that had addresses penned in red ink, FBI agent Frank Harrill, an agency spokesman, said in a statement.

Matthew Ryan Buquet, 38, of Spokane was charged last month with mailing a threatening communication in connection with one of those four letters, which was sent to a federal judge but intercepted by a court employee during a screening process.

A "determination will be made at some point" about whether to charge Buquet with sending any additional ricin-laced letters in the batch, Harrill said.

The FBI has said the case is not related to two other recent arrested involving ricin-tainted envelopes sent to elected officials. Actress Shannon Rogers Guess Richardson of New Boston, Texas, was charged Friday with sending ricin-laced letters to President Barack Obama and New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg. And martial arts instructor James Everett Dutschke, of Tupelo, Miss., was arrested April 27 on suspicion of mailing three earlier such letters to the president and others.

It will be sent next to a bioforensic lab to determine whether it, too, contains ricin, as did the other four letters in the batch from Washington state, the FBI said.

The FBI has not discussed a motive in the Spokane case. REUTERS

U.S. snooping revelations cause trouble for allies

Revelations of a huge, secret U.S. Internet spying program have raised awkward questions for allies, forced to explain whether they let Washington spy on their citizens or benefited from snooping that would be illegal at home.

U.S. officials have confirmed the existence of the secret program, codenamed PRISM. Lawmakers urge review of domestic spying, Patriot Act

Lawmakers yesterday called for a review of the government's monitoring of phone and Internet activities, and Democratic Sen. Mark Udall urged a reopening of the Patriot Act, the post-Sept. 11 law that gave intelligence agencies broader surveillance powers.

President Barack Obama's administration has come under criticism after the disclosure that the super-secret National Security Agency has been collecting massive amounts of data from private companies on phone calls and emails.

Forbes ranked the best schools by their return on a student's investment. / VSTOCK

What makes education such a good investment?

Rankings. Focus on the student to determine what makes the (financially) smartest college education.

Recently, Forbes Magazine released its list of "25 Colleges with the Best Return on Investment" — an opening act for its annual "America's Top Colleges List," which will be released later this summer.

Since Forbes released its first college rankings in 2008, the lists have become increasingly popular among students and parents and, in turn, coveted by colleges. But Forbes actually has very little to do with the creation of the lists or the methodology behind them.

The Center for College Affordability and Productivity — a conservative Washington, D.C., thinktank — creates the rankings for Forbes. The group generally advocates for market-based solutions to problems in higher education, and their rankings were developed in part to emphasize the student's role as a consumer.

"The U.S. News [and World Report college ranking] relies more on reputation. A fairly large component of their index is based on questionnaires with leaders of institutions," says Richard Vedder, the director of CCAP. "We wanted to be more student-centered than other rankings. We're interested in whether students feel the courses they're taking are interesting. Do they get jobs after graduation? What kind of money do they make? Do they obtain positions of high responsibility in our society? What's the debt load they incur?"

The 2013 list will be most valuable for prospective STEM (science, technology, engineering and mathematics) students, but may be less applicable in other fields. In terms of a baseline calculation of tuition dollars versus starting salary, not many fields can compete with STEM. The top 10 colleges are all either technical or engineering schools.

"I don't know that this list is more valuable than the other ones out there. It's just one more piece of information," says Susan Adams, a reporter at Forbes. "What distinguishes this one is that it looks at one particular factor: return on investment. It wasn't surprising to me that the schools at the top of the list were heavy on engineering and technical education."

Sarah Jessica Parker's shoe line

Watch out, Ivanka Trump, Rachel Bilson, Halle Berry, Fergie, Jessica Simpson, Santana and the seemingly endless list of celebrities who have a shoe line — Sarah Jessica Parker is stepping into the business.

The actress, who famously portrayed the shoe-obsessed Carrie Bradshaw in "Sex and the City," is launching her own line of footwear, trenches and purses. The line, called SJP, will be available next year at Nordstrom. According to Vogue, she is teaming up with George Malkemus, the CEO at Manolo Blahnik, for the line, because she is basically going to milk Carrie Bradshaw until there isn't a drop left.

As for the SJP line, "It's sort of soup to nuts," she tells the magazine. "You put on a shoe, and you put on a coat, and you wear a bag and, on the outside, when you're walking down the street, they really can tell the same story about yourself."

And that story is: You have a lot of money (or at least a high credit line), as the shoes range from $200 to $300, and the bags are around $700.

It was all fun and rain on an overcast and cold Thursday night when Skyy Vodka hosted an exclusive kickoff party aboard a yacht for the three-day Governors Ball music festival. Anna Kendrick, Chace Crawford, Olivia Palermo, Aziz Ansari and David Cross were some of the celebs who got their sea-legs. Crawford and Kendrick, co-stars on "What To Expect When You're Expecting," caught up over a game of ping-pong (and promotional shots like the one above), while Ansari hung out with Cross and James Murphy from the now-defunct LCD Soundsystem (Murphy later spun some tunes to the vodka- and rain-soaked revelers). Broadway's getting bigger

Neil Patrick Harris and Mike Tyson? Just another great Tonys show. / ANDREW H. WALKER, GETTY IMAGES

For the fourth (nonconsecutive) year, consummate host Neil Patrick Harris helmed the Tony Awards. The 67th annual ceremonies kicked off with an opening number dedicated to the many children who are currently taking the stage nightly on the Great White Way, ranging from the four young girls who share the lead in "Matilda" (who jointly received Tony Honors for Excellence in the Theatre) to the orphans of "Annie" and seemingly dozens of others. Harris sang of "so many child actors high on Red Bull and endorphins" and wondered, "Is there a Tonys daycare where all of you go?"

The first trophy of the night went to Courtney B. Vance for Best Performance by an Actor in a Featured Role in a Play for "Lucky Guy."

Later, Judith Light won as the featured actress in the same category for "The Assembled Parties." Other standouts as of press time were technical wins for "The Nance" (costume design and sound design of a play) and "Kinky Boots" (sound and orchestration for a musical). "Rodgers and Hammerstein's Cinderella" took home a Best Costume Design Award, while Dennis Kelly won for writing the book to "Matilda."

KEVIN MAZUR, WIREIMAGE

Big-name presenters included Scarlett Johansson, Alan Cumming, Liam Neeson, Oliver Platt, Zachary Quinto and Audra McDonald. But most of the evening's awards were given out by actors currently onstage on Broadway, in full costume, including the current leads Guy and Girl from last year's big winner, "Once." Mike Tyson (present) and Shia LaBeouf (not present) were lampooned for the former's one-man tribute show and the latter's sudden departure from "Orphans" this season.

Live performances included a mash-up of songs from "Matilda" (sporting 12 nominations, including for Best Musical), "Bring It On" (two nods) and "Cinderella" (nine nominations).

Box office. America purged this weekend, and Vince and Owen lost

Americans chose to spend their weekend with this charming fellow, from "The Purge." / UNIVERSAL PICTURES

Low-budget horror film "The Purge" scared up $36.4 million in ticket sales to lead the domestic box office in its first week in domestic theaters, zooming past the car-racing action film "Fast & Furious 6."

"The Internship," a comedy starring Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson based on the antics of slobs in search of a job at Internet giant Google, sold $18.1 million in tickets to finish fourth, according to studio estimates of sales at U.S. and Canadian theaters.

The film reunited Vaughn and Wilson, who teamed to make "Wedding Crashers" in 2005. According to Boxofficemojo.com, that movie generated $209.3 million in domestic ticket sales.

The duo's latest effort was projected by industry experts to gross a modest $17 million in ticket sales.

"The Purge," made for $3 million by the producer of the low-budget "Paranormal Activity" horror series, stars Ethan Hawke and Lena Headey. In a story about the United States in 2022, the government reduces crime by allowing almost all illegal acts to go unpunished during a 12-hour "purge" period.

Part science fiction, part horror, "The Purge" was dismissed by critics but eagerly awaited by horror fans. Industry experts had forecast that it would sell $20 million worth of tickets.

"Fast & Furious 6," of the series starring Vin Diesel, racked up $19.8 million to take second place, bringing its total since Memorial Day to nearly $202.9 million domestically and $584.6 million globally. In third place, the comedy heist caper "Now You See Me" continued its stronger-than-expected showing, with $19.5 million at U.S. and Canadian theaters, finishing in third place.

The post-apocalyptic "After Earth," starring Will Smith and his teenage son Jaden, continued its weak showing at the U.S. and Canadian box office with $11.2 million. The film has generated $46.6 million in total domestic sales — Will Smith's weakest performance since the 1993 film "Made in America," which grossed $44.9 million, according to Boxoffice mojo.com.

"After Earth" did perform strongly overseas, opening with $45.5 million in 60 territories over the weekend.

Rolling back into the Hub

Timeline. The Fifty and Counting tour hits town for two nights this week. Stephen Davis details a history of the Stones in Boston that is alternately odd, violent and colorful.

MICHAEL PUTLAND, GETTY IMAGES

This is the man who introduced the Stones to Boston, Arnie "Woo Woo" Ginsburg. / MICHAEL OCHS ARCHIVES

It started in 1964, when legendary Boston rock jock Arnie "Woo Woo" Ginsburg played Stones singles like "Tell Me" over radio powerhouse WMEX (1590 on the AM dial), one of the first stations in America to pick up on "England's Newest Hitmakers" in the wake of The Beatles.

Summer 1966: The surging Stones, sparked by founding guitarist Brian Jones, arrived in nearby Lynn to play a concert at the Manning Bowl. A riot started halfway into the first song ("Not Fade Away") as teens charged the stage. The band fled amid a fog of tear gas and flying chairs.

In 1969, the Stones returned to Boston with Mick Jagger playing Lucifer, and new guitarist Mick Taylor. Now they were the self-proclaimed "greatest rock & roll band in the world," and they proved it in the Boston Garden with razor-sharp new songs like "Midnight Rambler" and "Sympathy for the Devil." Some say that Satan called in the loan a few months later in California, when fans died at the notorious free concert at Altamont.

In 1972, the Stones returned to the Garden for two nights with horns, mirrored spotlights and a new act fashioned from Exile on Main Street. On opening night, the band's plane landed in Providence because smoke from a race riot in the city obscured Logan airport. In Providence, Keith Richards was arrested for punching a photographer as 18,000 restless Stones fans were entertained by opening act Stevie Wonder.

While officials scrambled to spring the guitarist from jail, Boston Mayor Kevin White famously took the stage. He asked for quiet, and told the fans, "My city is in flames." He said he was withdrawing the police guarding the concert to help contain the riot, and asked for good behavior from Boston fans. That night the Stones arrived in Boston five hours late, but they played well, and the exhausted fans left quietly, with no incidents reported.

Gimme Shelter: Boston Mayor Kevin White tells Stones fans that their featured entertainment would be late, and asked for calm as he needed to use the police elsewhere, on July 18, 1972. / SPENCER GRANT, GETTY IMAGES

In the summer of 1975. The Stones returned to the Garden with new guitarist Ron Wood and Billy Preston. They played the best rock show this writer ever witnessed, a mesmerizing display that climaxed during a song with a title usually printed as "Star Star," but is known to fans by a raunchier title. Mick Jagger played to the moment and mounted a 60-foot inflatable penis that appeared from a trap door and rode it around the stage in cosmic abandon.

The Stones skipped Boston on their 1978 and 1981 tours, but the band rehearsed for the latter at Longview Farm studio in central Massachusetts, and opened the '81 tour with a scorching set at Sir Morgan's Cove, a dive bar in Worcester. Capacity was about 150!

The Stones were feuding during most of the '80s, but when they returned to Boston with their Steel Wheels tour in October 1989, they came in red hot. The concert at the Patriots' Sullivan Stadium in Foxborough was the first of the band's game-changing extravaganzas, with giant screens projecting images of the 15 musicians on stage to sold-out crowds numbering in the tens of thousands.

In 1994, with the Voodoo Lounge tour, again in Foxborough, the Stones began a long run of opening their American tours in Boston. The band would spend a month with their families at the Four Seasons Hotel on Boylston Street, while they rehearsed and prepared the intricate stage effects and lighting cues for their big stadium shows. Drummer Charlie Watts was a regular at Cambridge jazz clubs Scullers and the Regatta Bar.

- The 1997 Bridges to Babylon tour featured a rip-roaring oldies set played in the middle of renamed Foxboro Stadium.
- The 1999 No Security tour brought the Stones to Fleet Center, which replaced Boston Garden, demolished in 1998.
- The 2002 Forty Licks tour, which the Stones opened at the (tiny) Orpheum Theater. Good luck getting in. (I didn't). Bootleg recordings reveal a killer version of the O'Jays' "Love Train."
- At Fenway Park in 2005, The Stones constructed two four-story corporate VIP condos, for ultra high roller fans, around and above the stage in center field. Excess all areas.
- The Rolling Stones last appeared in Boston (twice) during the Bigger Bang tour in 2006. In January they played TD Banknorth Garden. On sale, with the usual swag, were nine varieties of Rolling Stone labeled wines. That fall, they sold out Gillette Stadium, which replaced Foxboro.

Add some om into the office

Meditation. The corporate world is embracing mindfulness meditation in the office — and reaping the rewards.

Include some om in your agenda for a better, more productive day. / GOODSHOOT

Your business's productivity grows when employees increase focus, improve decision-making, unlock creativity and improve teamwork skills — all qualities enhanced by mindfulness meditation practices. In 1995, Mirabai Bush helped found the Center for Contemplative Mind in Society to explore how mindfulness practices, long used in alternative healing, might affect other sectors of American life. The center developed programs working with lawyers and judges, social justice activists, higher-education organizations and journalists. But it is Bush's work with businesses — like Google, National Grid, Monsanto and General Mills — that's really taking off. We asked her why.

Isn't it surprising that the corporate world is so open to meditation?
Well, successful businesses are extremely pragmatic. They'll do anything if it works. And the bottom line is measurable, unlike in other organizations. Also, in the last 10 years, there has been quite a lot of research on meditation's effects on the brain. All of this is interesting to people in business.

Which practices do companies find most effective?
It depends. We tailor workshops to an organization's needs. For instance, at Google, we realized that these very smart and competitive people had been in front of screens for most of their lives. They're good at algorithms, but not necessarily at working together. So we set up practices that develop awareness of yourself and others and appreciation for others. It's since been taught at Google headquarters in New York, Zurich, Beijing and Dublin. More than 1,000 engineers have gone through the program.

What's next? If companies are taking 101 now, what's the graduate-level course?
I've started teaching compassion meditations, which I'd at first thought would require too much vulnerability. We did it the first time with the regional managers of National Grid — you're looking at another person and repeating "just like me" phrases — and, to my surprise, they loved it.

You mentioned that companies cite bottom lines, but what, to you, is the real payoff?
There are deeper benefits. If you pay attention to your breath for 20 minutes, you watch everything in your mind arise and fall away over and over again: You begin to appreciate constant change. And you learn a deeper appreciation for others. You gain the ability to trust people, and also to become a person whom others trust.

— "Working with Mindfulness," Mirabai Bush's guided-meditation program, is available on CD at Morethansound.net/store.

TURN YOUR TENSION UPSIDE DOWN (LITERALLY)

One afternoon, I was hanging out with my friend Jenny in my office (which also acts as a yoga Zen den). Out of nowhere, Jenny got into a headstand. Jenny's an avid yogi, and she's known for her love of the practice — but I was a bit confused by her strong desire to be in a headstand. While upside down, Jenny explained that doing headstands helped her turn her mood around. Whenever she felt stagnant or blocked, doing some kind of inversion greatly supported her transition into a higher state of consciousness.

So rather than watch her while she revitalized her energy, I decided to join in on the action. I went into a headstand against the wall for support. Within a minute, I felt an energy rush. All my stagnant energy seemed to be literally turned upside down, and I started to feel more alive.

As time went on, I made inversions a daily routine. In addition to the supported headstand, I turned to plow pose. Both of these inversions are pretty easy to move into whenever you need a boost. I find plow pose a lot easier for people who are new to yoga. You can do this pose on your bedroom floor, outside on the grass or anywhere there is a soft surface.

Practice an inversion for one minute or more, and you will receive great benefits. This simple practice can turn your bad mood, stress or foggy mind around and recharge your energy. Inversions increase blood flow and improve concentration, memory and awareness.

Inversions also improve digestion and elimination — many yogis suggest inversions to overcome constipation. Another health benefit is that they promote lymphatic drainage and blood purification. The lymphatic system clears toxins from the tissues and supports your overall immunity. The reason you feel so rejuvenated after an inversion is because the pose is detoxifying.

Most importantly, inversions will lift your spirit and relieve depression. When you increase your circulation and send oxygen to the brain, you release neurotransmitters and endorphins while balancing your hormones.

Turn your blocks upside down with an inversion for one minute (or more) a day.

Your perspective might change when you get topsy-turvy. / GETTY IMAGES

Plow pose

Move into a shoulder stand: Lie on your back, and press your legs straight up overhead. Exhale and bend from the hip joints to slowly lower your toes to the floor behind your head. Keep your torso perpendicular to the floor and your legs fully extended. Lightly drop your toes to the floor, and lift your thighs and tailbone toward the ceiling. Draw your chin away from the breastbone and soften your throat.

To enhance the posture, you can press your hands against the back torso and press your back up toward the ceiling. You can use your hands for support, or you can release them away from your back and stretch your arms out behind you on the floor.

To exit the pose, drop your hands onto your back again, and raise your legs into a shoulder stand. Exhale your way down to the ground.

If you have back, neck or any structural problems, skip this exercise. / GETTY IMAGES

Two interrelated projects might have a good potential for profit if they're handled in tandem. Try to see the big picture, and act accordingly.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22.
A clever friend might discuss a new idea. If you believe it to be a good one and there's room for you to share in it, do so.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22.
We all have varied roles to play in life. You've been a giver for a while — now it's time to start receiving for yourself.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22.
If you take an old venture apart, you should be able to discover new ways to make it profitable. Don't be afraid to get a little messy.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22.
Your many accomplishments will not only be for yourself, but for the benefit of others. Your efforts will bear much fruit.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.
Usually, what we know is more significant than who we know. However, when it comes to the present cycle, your social contacts will be of vital importance to your efforts.

A casual acquaintance might ask for help sorting out a problem. Don't hesitate to ask for a fee if it falls in your occupational domain.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20.
An alliance has an excellent chance of being successful. Your instincts will tell you who will be productive and who won't.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18.
You're presently in a cycle where good things could come without much effort. Reap the benefits of your efforts, but don't take anything for granted.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20.
It isn't likely you will feel comfortable if you're allowed to play only a minor role in a big project. You belong up front, calling the shots. Find a way to get there.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20.
Your ability to capably balance several endeavors at the same time gives you an edge over the competition. Don't waste it.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21.
It can be unwise to change your mind at the last minute, but there are plenty of times when it's necessary. Today, you might need to call an audible for a good reason.

Metro's looking better all the time

I just wanted to thank everyone at Metro for their hard work, specifically Wednesday's edition. I've been reading your paper every day for the last two years, and that edition was by far the best I've read yet.

Every article was interesting, and the paper as a whole was really well-rounded. Keep it up!

Silver to small nothing new

Re: 'Say goodbye to Hollywood' (Metro, June 7-9) The phenomenon you've described is not particularly new. The Fall '71 schedule, for example, included TV series starring such film veterans as Henry Fonda, James Stewart, Glenn Ford, Gene Kelly, Tony Curtis, Shirley MacLaine and Anthony Quinn.

Intrusion is too much

Re: 'Administration defends phone record collection' (Metro, June 7-9) Thank you for reporting the government's intensive intrusion into citizens' telephone calls in the name of anti-terrorism. My response is to paraphrase Founding Father Benjamin Franklin's thoughts: Those who give up liberty for security deserve neither. Sorry, but I think it is time to repeal the Patriot Act, which apparently justifies such intrusions.

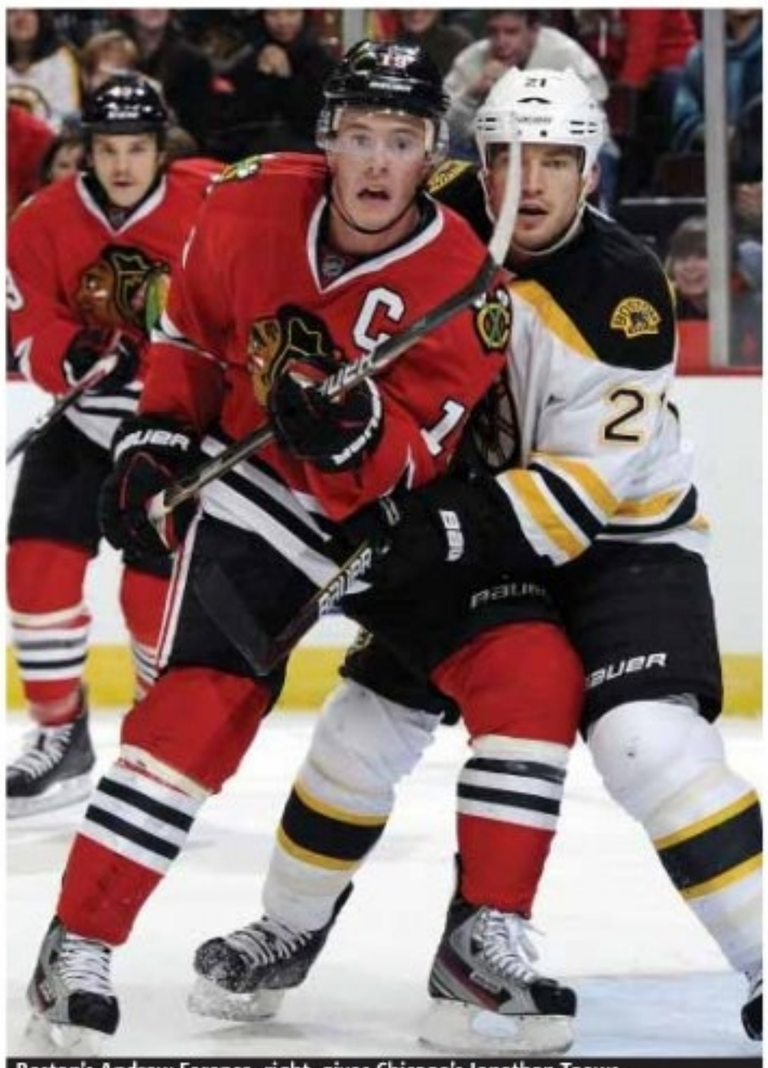
2013 STANLEY CUP FINALS — BOSTON vs. CHICAGO

Bruins-Blackhawks a dream matchup for nearly everyone



Boston's Andrew Ference, right, gives Chicago's Jonathan Toews all he can handle in October 2011. / GETTY IMAGES

NHL playoffs. Fans and TV execs alike are happy to see Chicago and Boston meeting in the Cup Finals.

Few have accused the NHL of being scripted, but the NBA or WWE couldn't have done a better job of setting up the perfect 2013 Stanley Cup Finals: Bruins vs. Blackhawks.

It's certainly safe to say that the lockout from this past winter is dead and buried at this point. Thanks to Chicago's 4-3 win in double overtime on Saturday night vs. Los Angeles, the Blackhawks advance to the first Original Six finals since 1979 (Rangers vs. Canadiens). Boston has never faced Chicago in the finals and it's only the third time in pro sports history that a Boston team has faced a Chicago team for a title: Super Bowl XX (Patriots vs. Bears) and the 1918 World Series (Red Sox vs. Cubs). In case you forgot, the Bruins won the Cup in 2011, the year after the Blackhawks broke their own long drought with a Cup of their own.

Chicago was the top team in the NHL all season, thanks to their NHL-record 24 game win streak (half the shortened season) to start the season. Predictably, things haven't gone as smoothly in the playoffs. The Blackhawks overwhelmed the Wild in five games in the first round before finding themselves in a 3-1 hole against the Red Wings in the quarterfinals. Chicago showed its character by rallying for three straight wins and continued that great play in the Conference Finals against the Kings by eliminating them in five games.

Much like the Bruins after their once-in-a-lifetime rally against the Maple Leafs in Game 7, the Blackhawks have been on fire since Game 5 vs. Detroit. Boston enters having won nine of its last 10 games while Chicago has won seven of its last eight.

The Blackhawks are another squad loaded with top-notch talent. Patrick Kane (six goals, eight assists) had struggled for much of the postseason but he had a hat trick in Game 5 vs. LA, including the game winner. Jonathan Toews (one goal, eight assists) hasn't found his goal-scoring touch but Chicago's captain plays a two-way game that closely resembles that of Patrice Bergeron. Marian Hossa (seven goals, seven assists) is competing in his fourth Stanley Cup Finals, Patrick Sharp (eight goals, six assists) has been consistent, Bryan Bickell (eight goals, five assists) is playing the best hockey of his life and Duncan Keith (two goals, nine assists) is one of the NHL's best offensive defensemen. Coming into the playoffs, most people felt that goaltender Corey Crawford (1.74 GAA, .935 save percentage, 1 shutout) was Chicago's weak link, but he's outplayed Jimmy Howard and Jonathan Quick in the last two rounds, answering his critics.

With two great American sports cities involved, it should be a ratings bonanza for NBC and execs at the TV network would like nothing more than a long series between these two storied franchises. With the way things have played out in the NHL playoffs so far, who'd bet against it?

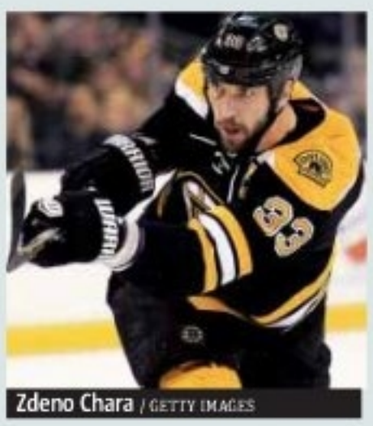
Hardly know ye

Unfamiliarity breeds respect

The last time the Bruins faced the Blackhawks, Newt Gingrich was battling Mitt Romney for the Republican nomination, Curtis Painter was the starting QB of the Indianapolis Colts and LeBron James was ringless. In other words, it's been awhile.

The Bruins beat Chicago in a shootout, 3-2, on Saturday, Oct. 15, 2011, at United Center with Chris Kelly and Nathan Horton scoring for the B's and Bryan Bickell and Patrick Kane finding the net for the Blackhawks.



Zdeno Chara / GETTY IMAGES

"You can say we don't know the Blackhawks, but it's pretty obvious they're a great team," Zdeno Chara told CSNNE.com. MATT BURKE

In hindsight, Cherington made all the right moves

With the Red Sox off to the start that they are, in first place in the AL East at the start of the second week in June, the question has been raised: Who deserves the brunt of the credit?

After the disastrous 69-win season in 2012, changes needed to be made, and big ones too. First the manager was fired and a new, familiar face was brought in, in John Farrell, followed by a series of free agent signings and trades, some big and some small. The man behind these moves was general manager Ben Cherington, and thus the man who deserves the majority of the credit for the team's early success.

"We've got to build a better team," Cherington said last November, a few weeks after trading for Farrell. "This is Boston, and we're going to build a team as quick as we can. It's not a two, four, five-year plan."

Many thought this season would be of the rebuilding variety in which the Sox might not contend for the AL East title, but because of the moves Cherington made the team is right there as one of the top teams in all of baseball.

As of yesterday, the team has nine players on the 25-man roster who were not with the Sox last season, and of the team's 320 RBIs, 106 (33 percent) have come from those players. Obviously the acquiring of bigger name players like Shane Victorino and Mike Napoli stand out, but it's the lesser known players that have made a significant impact.

Veterans David Ross and Jonny Gomes have been outstanding clubhouse guys, providing leadership as well as producing when called upon on the field. Koji Uehara has been arguably the Sox's most consistent reliever as he's tied for eighth in the AL in holds with 10. Ryan Dempster, despite his 3-6 record, has pitched quite well with a 4.39 ERA before yesterday's start. Mike Carp is hitting .317 with five home runs, despite not getting to play every day. Finally, Stephen Drew has shown some signs of coming around offensively and has played solid defense at shortstop. Also, what often goes unnoticed is that Cherington did not trade closer Andrew Bailey after acquiring Joel Hanrahan, which proved beneficial when Hanrahan suffered a season-ending elbow injury.

Power trip

Sox slug their way past Anaheim

Powered by four home runs the Red Sox beat the Angels 10-5 in the series finale yesterday afternoon at Fenway Park. The Sox were able to take two-of-three from the Angels this past weekend.

Jarrod Saltalamacchia was the star for Boston as he belted two homers, knocking in four runs. Mike Carp and David Ortiz also homered in the win. Saltalamacchia and Ortiz each had two hits along with Jose Iglesias to lead the 11-hit attack. The Red Sox are in Tampa today (7 p.m., NESN) where John Lackey will get the call; the Rays will counter with Alex Cobb. METRO
